The Nottingham names new director

Jennifer Ingerson, of Baldwinsville, has been promoted to the position of executive director of The Nottingham Senior Living Community in Jamesville.

"Jennifer has distinguished herself over the years as a resourceful professional and an excellent leader," said Steve Volza, senior vice president of Loretto Housing. "I have great confidence in Jennifer's potential and future here at The Nottingham. This is a wonderful opportunity for Jennifer and our staff, residents and their families."

Ingerson's professional experience in residential long-term care includes more than twenty years with the Loretto family of care where she has served as director of Administration & Residential Services at The Nottingham, director of Loretto North, director of operations for Brighton Management and as development market research specialist.

Ingerson briefly left Loretto to work for Hospice of CNY as director of research for the Central New York office for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

She returned to The Nottingham in 2001 and was promoted to associate executive director in 2009. Most recently, Ingerson received certification as a Lean Six Sigma Greenbelt from the Rochester Institute of Technology.

Ingerson is a graduate of Cortland State where she earned a bachelor's degree in health science/health administration. She received her master's degree in health services management from The New School of Social Research in New York City.

Ingerson resides in Baldwinsville with her husband and three children.

Benny Goodman-style swing revived Sunday at FFL

By Russ Tarby

Ron Joseph is one of New York State's hottest New Orleans-style jazz clarinetists.

He hails from nearby Rome, New York, so we're lucky to hear him every once in a while right here in Central New York.

Joseph will be featured when Rochester bandleader Jon Seiger stages a tribute to Benny Goodman at the Motto Musicale, at 2 p.m. Jan. 15, 2012, at Fayetteville Free Library's reading room, 300 Orchard St. Admission is free; 637-6374, ext. 328; fayetteville-freelibrary.org.

Over the years, Joseph has performed at Dixieland festivals throughout the Northeast and Canada. His diverse style – reflections of lifelong influences Jack Maheu, Peanuts Hucko, Kenny Davern and Pee Wee Russell – treat audiences to plenty of hot jazz, swing tunes and ballads.

His latest CD, Ron Joseph and Friends, is a live recording of a Canadian house party featuring Seiger on trumpet also an accomplished clarinetist, formerly with the Bear Cat Jass Band and now fronting his own Oswego-based Swingtet.

Ron Joseph eloquently expresses his thanks to the musicians who so deeply influenced him as a young man:

"I grew up to the sounds of The Salt City Six," he says. "At every opportunity my folks would make the drive from Rome to Syracuse to hear the Six. And like the postman, neither rain, sleet or snow...on more than one occasion they made the trip despite a blinding snowstorm.

I was in awe of [clarinetist] Jack Maheu then, and 47 years

Area Boy Scouts visit ESF

Members of Boy Scout Troop 40 of Longhouse Council got some lessons in hydrology when they met in Baker Laboratory at the SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry. The scouts, who were working on environmental science merit badges, saw a flume in action with the help of environmental resources engineering graduate student Mike Fay.

The scouts met in the James M. Hassett Laboratory for the Study of Hydrology and Hydraulics. The lab contains a 7-meter sediment and water recirculating flume, a 3-meter teaching flume, a river hydraulics table and other field and laboratory equipment. The lab was named in honor of a longtime ESF faculty member who chaired
